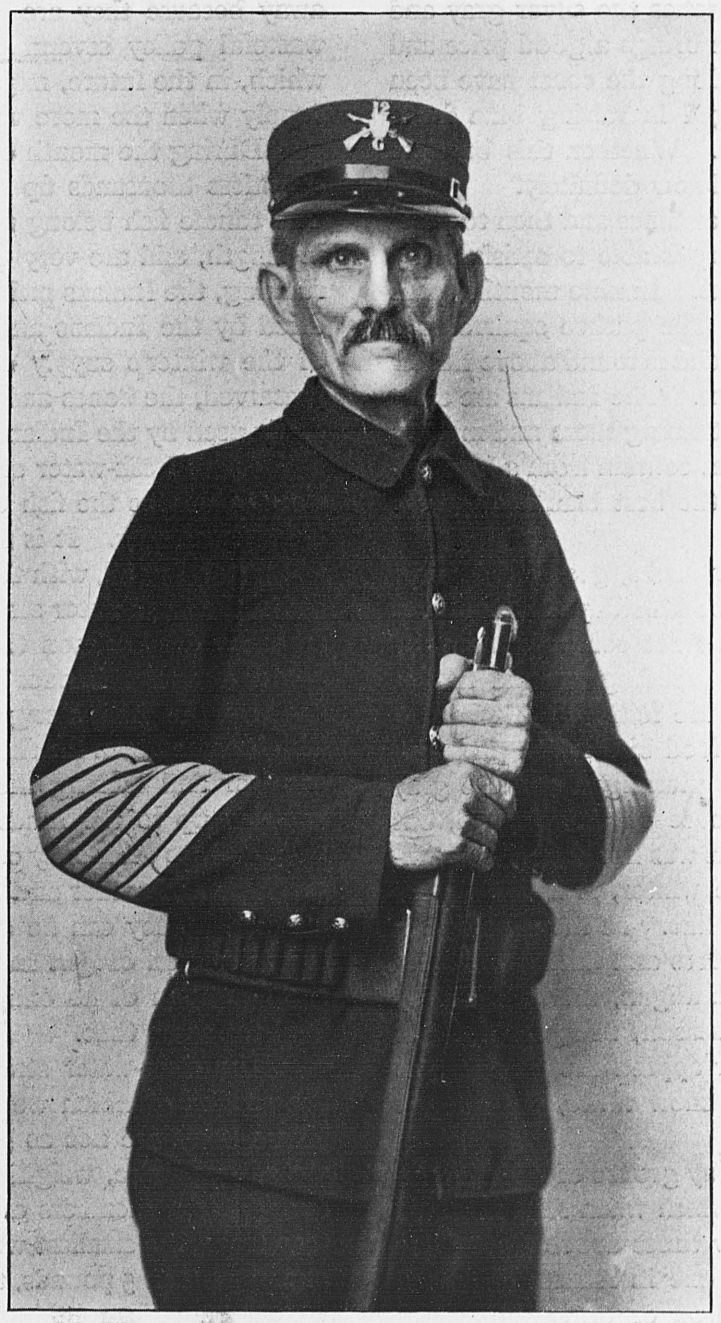
EXPLORATIONS IN ALASKA

CAPTAIN H. G. LEARNARD, 14th Infantry, U. S. A., who served with exploring expedition No. 3 for seven months, reports the following on the animals best fitted for use in Alaska, and also makes some valuable recommendations on the ration question:

Throughout the valleys and mountains of Alaska there are many game and fur-bearing animals, among which are found the following, viz.: Moose, caribou, mountain sheep, bear, wolves, lynx, wolverine, beaver, fox, marten, parkee squirrels, ducks, geese, pheasants, snipe, swan, and crane.

Moose were said to be very numerous around Cooks Inlet a few years ago, but, owing to the number killed by the Indians and miners during the past few years, the numbers in the immediate vicinity of of the coast have rapidly diminished, although I have been informed by Sergeant Yanert, who went to the tributaries of the Tanana, and by men who have wintered in the Yatnu Mountains, that there are large bands still in those portions of the interior. Few signs of moose were found on the Talkeetna and its tributaries. Moose are also very numerous in the interior of the Kenai Peninsula. As an instance of the way in which this noble game is slaughtered, I was informed that last winter a trader in the Cooks Inlet country paid the Indians $1.50 for the head and scalp of the moose and that in a very short time the natives near this trading station had killed over 50 moose, taking generally nothing more than the scalp and head, leaving the rest of the moose for the wolves or to rot on the ground. The moose is very shy and hard to kill, except in the rutting season, when the bull will at times charge at the slightest sound and becomes a very dangerous animal to meet. When a crust is formed on the snow sufficient to bear the weight of a man on snowshoes, the moose is readily killed in large numbers near the so-called yards.



WINFIELD R. SCOTT,

Private Company G, Twelfth Infantry, who holds the record of longest continuous service in the State

Caribou are quite plentiful in the interior, along the mountains, where there is an abundance of the caribou or reindeer moss. The Indians say that they are very difficult to kill, but the experience of the members of the party is that the caribou is far easier to kill than the moose. When first fired upon the caribou jump around and run together, as if for protection, and if they can not see the hunter, or can not wind him, he can fire away all his ammunition until several of the band have been killed. While making the trip with an Indian we killed four caribou in six days, and the Indian wounded three more; the meat not needed was given to Indians, or was cached for later use. One day the Indian saw five caribou and requested permission to try and kill one, and as the meat was nearly used up, permission was given; soon several shots were heard, and going up to the Indian I saw a fine caribou on the ground and he pointed out three others limping away, saying they were sick. When I asked him why he had shot so many, he replied that he wanted to see how many he could kill. I tried to explain to him that it was bad to kill game unnecessarily, but he will do the same thing over again as soon as opportunity presents itself. If the Indians were not so wasteful of the game it would last them a long time, and would, with judicious protection, increase instead of decrease, but at the rate it is now being slaughtered it is rapidly decreasing.

Mountain sheep (big horn) are reported to be very plentiful in the mountains and to afford the finest meat that can be secured in all Alaska. The sheep are always found above the timber line during the summer, on the most ragged and jagged peaks, but when snow commences to fall they are driven down until, in the middle of the winter, they are found in the valleys. While some claim that the sheep are very hard to kill, others found them quite easy. A few mountain goats are found in the Cooks Inlet country, but they are reported to be very plentiful in other parts of Alaska.

While in Alaska I saw three varieties of bear, viz., the brown, or cinnamon, the black, and the gray, or so-called "glacier" bear. Some old residents also say that there is a grizzly bear in the Cooks Inlet country, but none were seen by any member of the party. The brown bear attains an immense weight and size. Generally he will not molest a man unless first attacked, when he will fight, although the Indians around Sushitna Station are very much afraid of them, and I was cautioned by old residents to not molest a brown or cinnamon unless well prepared for him. While descending Lake

Kenai one of the party saw a cinnamon bear about a thousand feet above the level of the lake. About the time the bear was discovered he noticed the party in the boat and started down the mountain side, when the boat was promptly beached and preparations were made to receive him. When shot the bear was only about 200 feet above the level of the lake and still coming down. At another time four brown bears were found eating meat we had cached, and although we approached within 200 yards of them no notice was taken of us by the bears. The black bears are the most numerous and valuable on account of their fur, and the least ferocious of all the varieties of Alaskan bears. The gray or "glacier" bear is said to be the most ferocious and always ready for a fight. These bears are reported to attack men without the least provocation or warning.

The wolves are not very numerous; still several gray wolf skins, and occasionally a black one, are sold to the traders every winter. A few lynx and wolverine are also killed each season. Beaver and marten are more plentiful and valuable.

The most valuable fur-bearing animal in the Cooks Inlet country is the fox, of which there are four varieties, viz., the silver gray, the black, the blue, and the red, of which varieties the silver gray and black are the most valuable while the blue brings a good price and a ready sale. Some of the small islands along the coast have been occupied by white men who have engaged in raising blue foxes for the market, feeding them on salmon. Whether this business will be profitable or not no one seems to know definitely.

Rabbits are said to be very numerous at times and then to practically disappear, and no one in the country is able to satisfactorily explain the reason for such periodic changes. In nine months spent in Alaska I did not see a single rabbit. The parkee squirrel is a small animal which burrows in the ground and is found above timber line on the southern slopes of the mountains. The Indians are careful to preserve the hide of all those killed, tanning them and making parkee squirrel robes. Many of these robes contain from a hundred to two hundred skins, and make one of the best blankets for use in Alaska.

Alaska is a great breeding ground for ducks, geese, and snipe, and in the spring and fall these birds can be killed by the hundreds. The ducks and snipe breed in the Cooks Inlet country, while the greater portion of the geese have their breeding ground farther north. Nearly all varieties of these fowl are found in Alaska. A few swan and crane were seen. Another food bird is the pheasant, of which there are two varieties, viz., the ptarmigan and the gray pheasant, which resembles the native grouse of Washington, but is considerably smaller. The gray pheasant was not seen above timber line, while the ptarmigan, during the winter, is below timber line, and in the summer always above that line. In the winter both species of these birds feed off the spruce trees and during the summer feed principally on berries. The ptarmigan, unlike the gray pheasant, changes its plumage with the season, being brown and spotted during the summer, and as winter approaches changing as the verdure changes, until eventually it is snow white, rendering it almost invisible when on the snow.

Another small bird, spotted like the gray grouse of Washington and about the size of a "bobwhite" quail, which when shot at would run on the rocks and hide, was seen a few times above timber line at an elevation of about 3,500 feet. No one in Alaska could tell me the name of the bird. For some reason or other the Indian with me would not shoot them, saying that they were no good, but at another time when the same birds were seen some of them were shot, and, the meat supply being low, they were eaten and found to be as fine a table bird as any member of the party had ever eaten. This bird did not appear to be a migratory bird, but in the opinion of the party it was a species of the pheasant or grouse.

Among other birds in that portion of Alaska the following were found, viz.: hawks, eagles, owls, camp or Hudson Bay bird, ravens, gulls, loons, plover, and curlew. When ascending the Sushitna River many of the large white sea gull were seen, with some of their young, but all had gone when the party came down the stream in the middle of September. One noticeable feature about the birds of Alaska was the absence of all song birds.

The agents of the trading company state the amount of furs secured now is far less than the amount secured a few years ago, but at present it is a good paying business, as all furs are paid for in goods from their stores, on which a good profit is made as well as on the furs. It was reported that the agents of the Russian trading companies, when Alaska belonged to Russia, used to allow so many furs of each animal to be taken each year, and any Indian securing more than the number allotted to him was severely punished. By such a restrictive policy the fur-bearing animals did not decrease, and in consequence they were very plentiful in Alaska during that time.

Along the coast in Prince William Sound, as well as in Cooks Inlet, there are plenty of fish, the principal varieties of which are cod, halibut, flounders, candle fish, and salmon, of various varieties in season. Thousands of cases of salmon are packed and shipped away from the region, while thousands of salmon are simply thrown away because they are not of the choicest varieties. By such a wasteful policy several other species are being rapidly destroyed which, in the future, might become a valuable addition to the food supply when the more valuable ones are no longer plentiful.

During the month of May and part of June candle fish run in countless thousands up all the streams flowing into Cooks Inlet. The candle fish belong to the smelt family, are from 6 to 8 inches in length, and are very oily. After each tide, when these fish are running, the Indians pick them up from the beach. These are then dried by the Indians and put away with the dried salmon as part of the winter's supply of food. Nearly every part of the fish is preserved, the bones and head ostensibly for the dogs, but are generally used by the Indians, as the supply is usually insufficient.

Every fresh-water stream contains plenty of salmon after they start to run, as the fish endeavor to get to the head of the stream before spawning. It is stated that these fish never go back to the salt water, but all, with the exception of the king salmon, eventually die in the fresh-water streams. On some of the streams there were so many dead salmon that the water was polluted, and there was a very disagreeable odor arising from the dead fish. At this time of the year the grass along the streams is trampled down by the bear which come down for the fish, catching and eating as many as they care for and caching the balance. By the time the salmon have traveled up to the heads of the fresh-water streams they become thin, and are eventually covered with white spots by the attacks they make on each other and by striking against rocks and snags in the streams. They can be eaten if there is no other food to be had. Every salmon caught in a fresh-water stream, when dressed, from the condition of its entrails, showed no signs of having had any food for some time.

The clear-water streams are well stocked with trout, among the species of which were the dolly varden, rainbow, and brook. These trout are not as gamey as those caught in the States, but are of good size, weighing about 3 pounds on the average. One evening four members of the party caught, in fifteen minutes, sixteen trout, the smallest weighing about half a pound and the largest one more than 5 pounds, the others about 3 pounds each. No trout were seen or caught in the glacier streams, due probably to the muddy water, as this fish prefers clear water.

ANIMAL BEST FITTED FOR USE.

Residents of Alaska do not agree as to the best animal to use for transportation purposes both winter and summer, and I was in the country such a short time that no definite opinion could be formed by me.

There is an abundance of grass in the country for stock of all kinds, so the food question is not as essential if the animals are to be used near a settlement where hay has been put up as it is if the animals are to be used in a new country, where they would have to pick up their food each day or have the food transported.

Members of the party under the immediate command of Captain Glenn stated that the horse is preferable to the mule, as the latter animal is prone to give up as soon as he comes to soft ground. Then the mule is not a good swimmer, giving up as soon as water gets into his ears, and that is important, for if a person goes into the interior any distance many streams will have to be crossed, and generally by swimming the animals.

During the summer horses can be taken anywhere in the country traversed by members of my party by being careful to avoid the swamps and marshes, and by taking loads suitable to the country. The horses, if turned loose at night, can easily pick up all needed forage. Forage would have to be carried in winter, however, as all grass is buried under deep snow and it has lost all of its nutritive qualities.

They are sometimes used as pack animals in the summer, carrying packs weighing from 15 to 25 pounds.

In the past, with the small demand for transportation, the dog was the only animal tested, and he proved more or less satisfactory, but as the need for transportation increases it is probable that the dog will not be able to fulfill the additional demands.

Horses are used in the Northern States where the snow is as deep as in the Sushitna Valley, but roads exist in the States and are kept open all winter, while in Alaska there are no roads and almost no travel. Pack animals have been kept for several winters at Sunrise, wintering in good shape on hay made from the native grasses, with very little grain.

Horses will probably come into more general use as the country is developed and will prove as satisfactory as they do in the Northern States, but it is scarcely likely that in the unsettled portions the dog

Moose feed on the tender willow bushes and other shrubs, and it is stated that the horse will do the same, and if so a horse could partially pick his own living in the winter.

For transportation purposes in the summer, from what could be learned, it would seem as if the horse is the most suitable animal.

If reindeer will do all that is claimed for them, and can travel in deep snow, they might solve the winter transportation, as the caribou or reindeer moss is found nearly everywhere above the timber line. In places it is so thick that it whitens the appearance of the mountains. The native caribou (sometimes called reindeer) feed off of it most of the year.

The Indian dog is used by the natives to pull loaded sleds, and with good results, as 40 miles are made in that manner in a day. Feed in the form of dried salmon is fed to the dogs in the winter, while in the summer they are expected to pick up their own food.

will be replaced by the horse or any other animal for transportation purposes.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The best of food should be provided for a party going into the interior another year on similar work, and the ration should be increased in some things and have some additions made to it. It should be put up in convenient packages for transportation, and the perishable articles in waterproof sacking.

Plenty of dried fruit of assorted varieties should be provided as part of the ration, as fruit is a good preventive of scurvy and it is an article much craved by all. While berries can be picked in season, few can be found until about August 1.

The allowance of sugar is insufficient and should be increased about 50 per cent. The sugar furnished for the use of the party boat when it had been towed into the water too swift or deep for them to wade. After the sugar became wet it was impossible to dry it out, but instead it dripped away, and about 25 per cent. was lost, the remainder becoming so saturated with dirt that if any other sugar could have been secured that with the party would not have been used. When the party arrived at Sushitna Station and a variety of food could be secured, nearly all made the first meal out of bread and syrup, such was the craving for sweets. If none of the sugar provided for the party had been lost the allowance would still have been insufficient.

Sugar should be put up in waterproof packages.

The vegetable portion of the ration should be furnished in a desiccated state, and as it is easily ruined by water it should be put a portion becomes a serious matter.

More black tea should be taken than is needed for the use of the party, as there is no food so highly prized by an Indian as black tea, and to secure it he is willing to do any service desired. Before Indian guides could be obtained at Sushitna Station it was necessary to buy plenty of tea.

An Indian, when he first comes to camp, expects to have a cup of tea and some crackers, at least; and if these articles are not given he will not talk, but if they are he will furnish all the information he possesses.

Some chocolate should be provided, as it is very nourishing. Soldiers who are required to wade in the water and be wet every day, as members of the party were while ascending the streams, up in waterproof packages. Bacon spoils quickly in such a moist climate, unless it is thoroughly smoked. Of the bacon provided for the use of the party that portion intended for issue was in very poor condition in October, having been put up slightly smoked, while the breakfast bacon had been thoroughly smoked and was in a far better state of preservation than the issue bacon.

Flour after getting wet usually dries and forms a cake inside the sack, but where it is handled as much as the flour for the use of the expedition, the cage is constantly breaking and each time it is wet the water works in farther, until all the flour in the sack is spoiled. After provisions are transported into the interior many miles from a place where a new supply can be obtained the loss of need the the best of food and more variety than there is to the ration.

The whipsaw furnished from the tools of the relief expedition was worthless and nothing could be done with it. A good whipsaw was borrowed from the Indians and used until timber for the boat was sawed. The best of tools should be provided and all required furnished. In the outfitting of an expedition the opinion of an officer who has been in Alaska should be given great weight. I was informed that the chief men of the Geological Survey parties were given a certain sum of money for the use of their respective parties, and were allowed to secure such food and supplies as they deemed necessary, and were not hampered by regulations which interfered constantly with the successful completion of the task assigned to them. The Army expeditions should be treated in the same way, the commanding officer being given discretionary powers as to the manner in which his task should be solved. He should be provided with the necessary funds and be able to pay every employee in cash. When checks are given they are heavily discounted, and the native or other employee suffers in consequence, while if, as was usually done because of lack of funds, service vouchers are given, the employee is kept out of his pay for months, or if he sells it the rate of discount is higher than on the check. Such methods of doing business are prejudicial to the interests of the Government, and it is not surprising that a higher rate of pay is demanded for services performed for the Government than is required for the same service performed for private parties.

To keep faith with those employed by me, especially the Indians, resort was had to private funds, and later arrangements were made with the Alaska Commercial Company to take the service vouchers. By this means the Indians were protected somewhat, but it is quite a commentary on the Government's methods of doing business to state that such an arrangement was necessary.

Arrangements should be made by the proper officer of the War Department to do away with the majority of the vouchers and papers required for the settlement of accounts upon the completion of the season's work.

If vouchers are required from a mistaken notion that the interests of the Government are protected by their use, I might state that men can be found anywhere to sign any voucher desired. If it is done because an officer can not be trusted, then such an officer should be discovered and put out of the service. The present arrangement of doing business tends to bring the Government into disrepute and should be modified in a country like Alaska.

Before submitting this report I desire to state that it was impossible to take copies of some of the field reports sent to you, and as they are now in your possession at Washington, while, owing to military necessity, I am compelled to prepare my report at Vancuver Barracks, Wash., the difficulty attending its preparation can readily be seen.

The majority of the maps of the trips made by me and the report of Sergeant Yanert on his trip to the tributary of the Tanana are also in your possession and could not be read by me while preparing this report. Many things concerning the trip have been too much condensed in this hurried report, and there has not been enough time given to correct that which is submitted.

During the summer a few men were bothered once or twice with bowel trouble, and nearly every member of the party was troubled to a greater or less extent with the rheumatism. There was no other sickness among the members of the party.

Each and every member of the party under my charge afforded me all possible assistance and performed every duty, no matter how disagreeable or hard it might be, as cheerfully and perfectly as possible under the conditions. It seems very hard that by reason of being in Alaska some of them suffered in promotion while performing as hard and faithful service as if they were at the front on the field of battle.

Sergeant Yanert, Troop K, Eighth Cavalry, has proven himself a worthy man and thorough soldier, well meriting promotion to the grade of second lieutenant, and he is recommended to the authorities for favorable consideration whenever promotions to that grade are made from men serving in the ranks. Attention is respectfully invited to his map and report and to the manner in which he performed all the duty intrusted to him. If work in Alaska is to be continued, no better commissioned officer for such work could be secured, if he is promoted to that grade, than he would prove to be.

THE issuing of the khaki uniform to the Guard for the coming encampment is a judicious and economical move and it is received with general satisfaction throughout the State. The company commanders especially regard this as a great saving, inasmuch as the kersey uniforms will last so much longer by doing away with their use at the encampments.

AT the dedication of the new armory of the 13th Infantry, which will take place June 14th, Vice-President Roosevelt is expected to deliver the opening address.

In connection with this ceremony "Our State Army and Navy" Journal will issue a handsomely illustrated souvenir number, which will contain a full history of the Regiment from its very inception, giving a description of the new armory and biographical sketches of former and present officers of the command, as well as of the several committees appointed in connection with this grand event.

IT is rumored that Captain Fremont Stokes, formerly Company "A" of the 13th Infantry, will in all probability command a 9th Regiment Company. It is possible that this means the first step of the final reorganization of the 3d Brigade Regiments.

The 13th Regiment at the present time has but 11 companies and the 4th Regiment but 10. It would not be surprising if the Easton Company "I" of the 13th would be assigned to the 4th and two of the Pittston companies of the 9th transferred to the 13th.

Colonel Dougherty's command would then be obliged to draw two companies from another Regiment in order to complete the three battalion formation.

THE inspections in the 3d Brigade are completed with the exception of the eight companies of the 13th Infantry. The fact of Majors Clarke and Millar each inspecting a portion of the Brigade seems to meet with considerable displeasure.

It is a well known fact that Major Millar believes in high ratings, while Major Clarke feels that companies in our service cannot possibly reach a state of perfection. It is on this very question that dissatisfaction is sure to arise when the ratings are announced. While it is unfortunate that these conditions exist this year, they were unavoidable. Owing to pressure of business Major Clarke found it impossible to inspect the commands in the northeast section of the State.

THE boys of the Lackawanna Valley, are beginning to regard Major William S. Millar, Assistant Adjutant General of the 3rd Brigade, as a "twentieth century crusader." Major Millar is the leading magistrate of the city of Scranton and is up early and late watching for opportunities to inaugurate reforms.

His latest crusade is on the newsboys. It seems to be the habit of many of these street gamins to loiter on the thoroughfares at all hours of the night, appealing to the "Owl" public to help them out on their "stuck" copies of New York 9 o'clock extras. Many of these are children of tender age and frequently infest the alleyways and hallways of the business section of the city, not returning home for a week at a time. It is this habit that the Major hopes to break up by arresting all who are found on the streets after eleven o'clock. It is proposed to turn them over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

IN accordance with the direction of the late General William Reiley, a medal is to be presented from time to time to the enlisted man having the greatest length of continuous service in the Guard. Last year Private Elwell of the 2d Infantry was the fortunate recipient of this reward of merit, and numerous inquiries have been made of "Our State Army and Navy" Journal from all parts of the State as to who will be next in line to receive this decoration.

Owing to the many changes in the Guard, we have found it rather difficult to obtain the information desired, but Private Scott, of the 12th Infantry, whose illustration appears on page 3, seems to be the oldest active man in the service of the State to day, with Quartermaster Sergeant George Austin of Battery "C" as a good second. Sergeant Austin enlisted June 21, 1871, and the official record shows that his service has been continuous for thirty long years, and during this long period of enlistment he has not missed any tour of duty.

The man having the third longest record for this service in the National Guard is Trumpeter Ellis Pugh. He enlisted in the National Guard organization of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry on January 1, 1874. He has served in this capacity continuously since that time.

THE First Brigade was largely represented at the annual military day exercises at Cheltenham Academy on May 17th. Among those present were Colonel O. C. Bosbyshell, Colonel Thomas Potter, Jr., Colonel James B. Coryell, Captain John Osborn, 1st Infantry; Captains Graham, Hamilton, Bower, Hendler and Myers and Lieutenants Thompson, Bellas and Stiles of the 3d Infantry, and several officers from the 2d, 6th and 4th Regiments.

Colonel Coryell was the senior active officer present and during the course of the signal exercises, gave the following message for transmission: "The officers congratulate you on your excellent drilling." Signed, Coryell. This was wigwagged to a station a distance of 1,000 yards and the reply was, "They compliment us greatly; we appreciate it greatly." Signed, Robinson.

The general drill, appearance and bearing of the corps of cadets show a marked improvement over last year, and it is quite evident that Major A. D. Sayer, U. S. A., has inaugurated thorough discipline in the corps.

Another marked improvement was the new dress uniform patterned after the West Point dress.

Dr. John D. Skilton, who is the Principal of the institution, deserves great credit for the many improvements made during the past year.

Personal Mention

The assignment of Major and Surgeon William Howard King to the 2d Infantry is a well merited and popular appointment.

It is reported that the inspection of the 8th Infantry was very gratifying this year.

In all probability, Major William P. Clarke will be ordered on duty at the rifle range during the State matches.

Major Walter Washabaugh, 6th Infantry, will shortly leave the service owing to pressure of business. Major Washabaugh has had a long and faithful service in the Guard. He is the son of Colonel Perry M. Washabaugh, a former commander of the 6th Infantry. Major Washabaugh commanded Company "H," 6th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, during the Spanish-American War.

Captain James Dewey, 9th Infantry, is in a predicament over the expiration of term of service of forty of his men, June 23d. It is stated that the sentiment of the labor unions in this locality is strongly adverse to the Guard and it is feared that some of the companies in the anthracite coal regions will be seriously affected by this state of affairs, and their showing at the coming encampment will not be the same as in former years.

As stated exclusively in "Our State Army and Navy" Journal sometime ago, Colonel Theodore F. Hoffman, 8th Infantry, contemplated the disbandment of Company "F," located at Girardville. In General Orders No. 14 the disbandment of this company is officially announced. This leaves Colonel Hoffman with but nine companies. Lieutenant-Colonel Hutchison, Majors Holmes and Speck will have to be content with three company Battalions at the coming encampment.

The state of affairs at Pittsburg on the armory question is indeed deplorable. It is surprising how Colonel Rutledge can keep his men interested in their State duties when they are so mercilessly thrown out in the "cold," with no place to drill.

The 14th Infantry and Battery "B" are comfortably enough housed, but have by no means modern quarters. We should like to see an effort made on the part of some of our influential citizens in the western part of the State to secure a proper home for these organizations who are so nobly serving the Commonwealth.

In the resignation of Lieutenant Harry E. Anderson, Company "F," 6th Regiment, the service loses one of its most efficient line officers. Lieutenant Anderson has been connected with the Guard since June 19, 1888. He was a graduate of Girard College and at one time a Corporal in the Hartranft Light Battery. After serving two years in this organization he enlisted in Company "F," 6th Infantry, under Captain Harry Jacobs, going through the several grades of non-commissioned office and on December 30, 1898, was elected Second Lieutenant, and subsequently First Lieutenant. During the Spanish-American War, Lieutenant Anderson served as Corporal throughout the campaign.

EIGHTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE STATE FENCIBLES.

The Old Guard Banquet in honor of the 88th anniversary of the Infantry Corps, State Fencibles, was held at their Armory on Saturday evening, May 25th. The affair was a brilliant one and the gathering most notable. The following toasts were responded to:

"Old Guard".....Hon. Robert E. Pattison.
"The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania," Hon. George S. Graham.
"The National Guard of Pennsylvania,"
Major-General George R. Snowden.
"Patriotism of Our City".....Hon Charles F. Warwick.
"State Fencibles".....Emanuel Furth, Esq.
"Days of Our Youth".....Hon. Wm. B. Smith.
"Our Legislative Friends".....Hon. John T. Harrison.

Ex-Governor Robert E. Pattison gave a graphic account of this time-honored organization, relating in detail how Company "A" of the 4th Regiment, of which he was a member, was merged into the State Fencibles. For many years he shouldered a gun as first corporal of the famous Fencibles. This was as high as he could get until he suddenly jumped to the exalted position of Commander-in-Chief of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, holding this position for eight years. In his closing remarks he laid particular stress on "once a Fencible always a Fencible," and hoped to see the organization again actively connected with the Guard.

Major-General George R. Snowden spoke feelingly of the organization, and was proud to have had them under his command for nearly twenty-two years. He stated "like the brook of Tennyson the citizen soldiery of Pennsylvania would live forever." He also said that the National Guard of the Keystone State was an example for the Guard of the entire United States, and this was never more ably exemplified than the mobilization of the troops at Homestead, which was accomplished in 24 hours time. It would have taken the United States Army four days to assemble a like number of men. The two finest volunteer regiments that served in the Spanish-American War and Philippine insurrection came from Pennsylvania, viz., Tenth and Twenty-eighth Regiments.

Hon. Chas. F. Warwick was brim full of patriotism and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause.

The "ex-dandy" Mayor, Hon. William B. Smith, was in his usual good spirits, his speech creating laughter throughout.

The orator of the evening seemed to be Emanuel Furth, Esq., an old Fencible, who spoke humorously of the good old days he had seen while wearing the dress coat, with three inches of padding, and the gorgeous shako of the Fencible. His speech was frequently interrupted with prolonged applause and his remarks left a deep and lasting impression on those assembled.

COMPANY "G" NINTH INFANTRY, CELEBRATES DEWEY DAY.

It has been an annual custom with Company "G" of the 9th Infantry to celebrate Dewey Day with a reception and dance at Hazle Park, Hazleton, Pa. The illustration on page 6 shows a portion of the dance pavilion with Majors McKee, Sharpe, and Captains Pardee, Frantz, Colony, and Lieutenants Ravert and Conner in the group.

Captain Pardee, who is one of the youngest company commanders in the service, has a very active and efficient company. They propose in the near future to build a suitable Armory as their present quarters are entirely inadequate. Several of the leading citizens of the town have already offered a building site to Captain Pardee.

The reception was a thoroughly enjoyable affair and the several out-of-town officers who attended speak in the highest praise of the treatment accorded them by the officers of Company "G."

A meeting of the Board of Officers of the 9th Regiment took place at the office of Captain Frank Deitrick, City Hall, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on Sunday, May 26th, and several important matters were discussed for the future interest of the Regiment.

MEMORIAL DAY.

VOICES OF THE PAST.

This bright May morn again we come
  With bugle note, and muffled drum,
And funeral dirges from the dead—
  With banners waving—and martial tread
Of loyal feet—to deck the graves
  Of fallen braves.

From out the buried past we hear,
  Voices ringing loud and clear,
War's deafening shouts we hear again—
  The Colonel's charge to "Close up, men!"
The ragged gaps in the walls of blue
  Where the iron surge rolled heavily through.

And again we see the crimson drips,
  Ooze from the dying soldier's lips.
With the murmured prayer for the loved at home
  We hear the low whispers, "Dear mother, come."
Then he sinks to rest, to wake no more
  To sounds of love—or din of war.

Sad memory turns to Southern skies,
  And tears bedew our misty eyes—
Through hospital wards we tread again
  And see long rows of wounded men;
With quivering lip, and fading eye—
  We hear their whispered last "Good Bye."

But well they sleep who sank to rest—
  On Pennsylvania's loving breast,
Where the cypress weeps, and roses bloom,
  And sweet violets kill the lowly bloom,
On Freedom's altar these were slain,
  Their deeds will live when centuries wane.

Full many a Northern blast has swept—
  Where unknown heroes long have slept,
On plains where palm trees wave
  And wild flowers deck the lonely grave.
In prison pens 'neath Southern skies—
  Ah! many a Martyr closed his eyes.

Long weary years since then have sped
  And marked the fields where heroes bled,
When traitorous foes fought hard to sever
  Our Glorious Union linked forever.
Fame guards the spot where Patriots sleep—
  And Glory her proud vigils keep.

They are not dead—but only sown—
  And live forever as God's own
Beneath the mold, as living seed,
  We reap the harvest of their deed—
They broke the shackles of the Slave,
  And Freedom to a Nation gave.

Why call them dead—who only sleep?
  Where Fame eternal vigils keep—
On sculptured shaft, and storied urn,
  Fair Victory points to words that burn
With Truth divine—and Glory keeps
  Her record bright where Valor sleeps.

GERMAN CUSTOMS WAR WITH HAITI.

Vice-Consul-General Murphy transmits from Frankfort, April 18, 1901, translation of a clipping from the Frankfurther Zeitung, as fcllows:

Official notice has been given that the rates of duty for wares imported from Haiti are to be doubled, because that Republic has refused to extend to Germany, under the most-favored-nation clause of the treaty, the customs advantages which it has granted to other nations. This brings us face to face with a customs war with Haiti. Our exportation to Haiti is, however, so small that it can not be seriously injured by such a contest, it having amounted in 1897 to 1,400,000 marks ($340,000), falling in 1898 to 678,000 marks ($160,000) and in 1899 to 472,000 marks ($115,000). Our importations from Haiti are somewhat larger; but they are also falling off, their value being, in 1897, 8,640,000 marks ($2,000,000); in 1898, 6,570,000 marks ($1,600,000); and in 1899, 6,450,000 marks ($1,500,000). The articles imported were: Dyewoods (blue wood), 295,000 marks ($70,000); hides, 57,000 marks ($14,000); raw coffee, 1,729,000 marks ($400,000); and cocoa beans, 2,179,000 marks ($500,000).

The cocoa was of poor quality, but the amount supplied by Haiti formed about 10 per cent. of Germany's entire importation of this article, and so it is possible that the customs war may injure some German cocoa factories.

The matter is more serious to users of blue wood. Especially in the Kingdom of Saxony (Dresden, Leipzig, Chemnitz, and Zittau), there are large establishments which use annually 20,000 double centners (2,000 tons) of blue wood, which in some cases comes entirely from Haiti. As 700 kilograms of blue wood are used to produce 100 kilograms of extract, the collection of additional duty at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem would increase the price of each 100 kilograms of blue wood 2 marks (47.6 cents). The cost of 100 kilograms of extract would accordingly be increased 14 marks (nearly $3.50), while the duty on imported extract is only 3 marks (72 cents) per 100 kilograms. An increase of duty on extracts would arouse the opposition of both the textile and dyeing industries; but if the duty on extracts is not raised when the duty on blue wood is increased, many establishments in Germany now using blue wood will be forced out of business.

It has been the custom in most Companies for many years to appoint a camp mess committee, with the Captain usually as ex-officio Chairman, the object being to take some extra provisions in addition to what the State furnishes. These are paid for by the men who voluntarily agree to give $1.00 out of their camp pay. Thus they secure a mess which not only provides them the substantials but little luxuries which makes the soldier feel good during his tour of duty. The committee's work can be considerably lessened this year by placing their orders with E. A. Bowker & Co., 13th and Market streets, Philadelphia. This firm will take special pains in filling orders for the encampment. Their resources are so large that they are enabled to have a variety that pleases the boys. The several Captains who purchased from this firm last year speak in the highest terms of the treatment they received, not only the excellent qualities furnished, but the reasonable prices charged

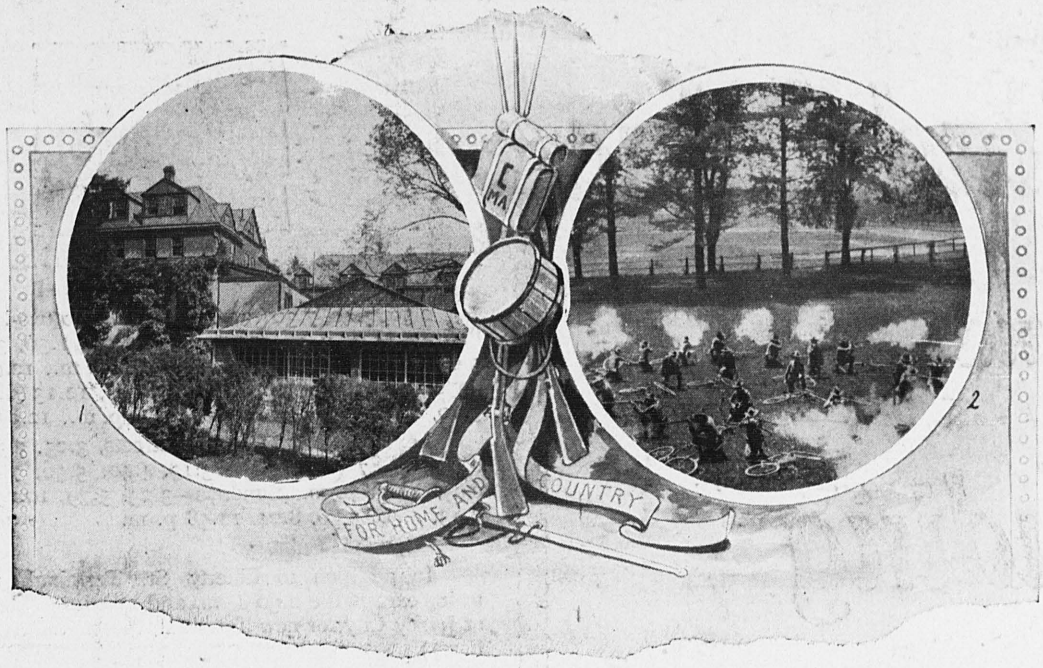
CHELTENHAM MILITARY ACADEMY

OGONTZ, PA.

(NEAR PHILADELPHIA)

"AN IDEAL SCHOOL IN AN IDEAL LOCATION"



CHELTENHAM MILITARY ACADEMY, on the summit of the Chelten Hills, near Philadelphia, has a location and environment rarely equaled for beauty and healthfulness. The School was founded twenty-eight years ago by the late Rev. Samuel Clements, D. D., and from its opening has had the best class of patronage and has met with unusual success in the training and education of young men and boys. A majority of its graduates enter leading colleges or scientific schools, and for the past six years its annual representation in such institutions has been equal to one-half the attendance of the school.

Among the features that have contributed to the success and popularity of the Academy, the following will at once commend themselves to judicious parents: 1. The attendance is limited to seventy boarding pupils, in order that the classes may not be so large as to render attention to the individual pupil inconvenient or impossible. 2. Ten resident instructors (an average of one for every seven cadets), selected for their ability and experience and for their willingness to take an interest in the welfare and happiness of the pupils. 3. An honest endeavor to train and educate the whole boy rather than to merely prepare him to pass college entrance examinations. 4. The moral tone and influence of the institution.

Parents seeking the right school for a boy are cordially invited to visit the Academy, or to communicate with the Principal. Rooms are assigned in order of application.
